IN THE NEWS

Pupils will be taught how to speak properly

Children will have lessons on how to speak proper English in formal settings, under an overhaul of the curriculum for 7 to 11-year-olds. The proposals, from Sir Jim Rose, a former head of Ofsted, place emphasis on teaching children to "recognise when to use formal language, including standard spoken English". They include how to moderate tone of voice and use gestures. News, page 3
